it. An adult who doesn't know it with a set mouth and clear eyes. "What do you want?" the wizard had asked, knowing what he wanted. HE SPENT THE NIGHT in their old place in the shallows. Maybe he hoped she would come, but she did not come, and he soon slept in sheer weariness. He woke in the first, cold light. He sat up and thought. He looked at life in that cold light. It was a different matter from what he had believed it. He went down to the stream in which he had been named. He drank, washed his hands and face, made himself look as decent as he could, and went up through the town to the fine house at the high end, his father's house. there; a half-month to go, another to return; he would be back well before the Fallows at the. Though he seldom left the city, Early prided himself on his knowledge of all the Archipelago, gleaned from his sailors' reports and the marvelous ancient charts kept in the palace. He studied them nights, brooding on where and how he might extend his empire. "What I have to do, you see," the old wizard said, still talking to Silence because it was a comfort to talk to him even if he was no longer there, "is get into the mountain, right inside; but not the way a sorcerer-pro prospector does; not just slipping about between things and looking and tasting. Deeper. All the way in. Not the veins, but the bones. So," and standing there alone in the high pasture, in the noon light, Heleth opened his arms wide in the gesture of invocation that opens all the greater spells; and he spoke. Hound, and used him as seldom as possible, but Hound was too useful not to use. he must be bound, named, called. Irioth began to say the words that would bind him, and the shaken. "That would be only what the women of the Hand call it, keeping its meaning from the wizards and the pirates. To them no doubt it would bear some other name." "Nowhere," said the Doorkeeper. "I let her out as I let her in, at her desire." down again and tried to hold still. The spellbonds around his chest kept him from breathing. himself, he said, the farmers round about provided, considering themselves well recompensed by the. Early raised his hand to lay the binding spell on him. His hand was stayed, held immobile half lifted at his side. supposed to be, so they sailed on with seven other ships, south a ways, and met up with a fleet. Tell him what he sees, Anieb whispered in Otter's mind, and he spoke: "A stream runs through. Her breath stuck in her throat. She gasped a little for air. When she recovered herself she saw. were everywhere, though ranged in some order. Near the fine stone fireplace, where a tiny wisp of observations concerning nature, agriculture, sea lore, and crafts, cautionary tales and parables. Very few people ever spoke to Gelluk unless he compelled them to. The spells by which he silenced, weakened, and controlled all who approached him were so habitual to him that he gave them no thought. He was used to being listened to, not to listening. Serene in his strength and obsessed with his ideas, he had no thought beyond them. He was not aware of Otter at all except as a part of his plans, an extension of himself. "Yes, yes, you will," he said, and smiled again. All day he stayed near the Otter's House, keeping watch on Irian, making her eat a little with him. She came to the house, but when they had eaten she went back to her place on the streambank and sat there motionless. And he too felt a lethargy in his own body and mind, a stupidity, which he fought against but could not shake off. He thought of the Summoner's eyes, and then it was that he felt cold, cold through, though he was sitting in the full heat of the summer's day. We are ruled by the dead, he thought. The thought would not leave him. am. . . I was a pilot. The last time I was here. . . don't be frightened!". He was fortunate in having met a farm heifer, not one of the roaming cattle who would only have. Medra stood silent. His face felt hot. He looked down.
