When he was Gelluk's prentice and assistant, he had encouraged his master in the study of the lore. his own clean comfortable home, even more different from the cold austerity of the wizard's house. When she asked him if students came there from the Great House, he said, "Sometimes." Another time he said, "My words are nothing. Hear the leaves." That was all he said that could be called teaching. As she walked, she listened to the leaves when the wind rustled them or stormed in the crowns of the trees; she watched the shadows play, and thought about the roots of the trees down in the darkness of the earth. She was utterly content to be there. Yet always, without discontent or urgency, she felt that she was waiting. And that silent expectancy was deepest and clearest when she came out of the shelter of the woods and saw the open sky. Only in Paln did wizards combine the two practices, in the arcane, esoteric, and reputedly. "They show me what I should do," Irioth said, "and who I am. They know my name.
