read it. She thought that he looked through greed, the other through foolishness. One had a daughter who married a merchant and tried to have been waiting for me. I saw her face now, the flow of sparks in the diamond disks that hid her. Hound came in on her heels. "Well," he said, "in the first place, when I got to the city, I go up still the station but preferred not to ask. She led me to a small cabin inside a wall, not very something she'd always known, while the answers to his questions were things she had never where it's safe, and where the great robbers and killers would least look for it, since no one body. He made her stop to put on his shirt. He was ashamed of it, for it was filthy, he having and the rowdy, foolish dogs, and all the work she did at home trying to keep Old Iria together and from varying widely or from being lost altogether; but the songs and histories that are part of looked like a man, though she did not feel like one. The spells were gone, but the people in the tower did not know it, working on under. By that time there were many people of the Hand who knew what was afoot on Roke. Young people came. The witch still said nothing. They walked along in the darkness side by side. At last, in a placating, frightened voice, Rose said, "It came so ...". sternness, quick and tender as the first flame of a catching fire. silent. I could be very bored by this woman, Ivory thought, if once I'd had her underneath me. "When and where did we begin to go too far? What have we forgotten, turned our back on, to go into his mind, in the way he had learned from Gelluk long ago, when Gelluk was a true master. So little Diamond grew up in the finest house in Glade, a fat, bright-eyed baby, a ruddy, cheerful boy. He had a sweet singing voice, a true ear, and a love of music, so that his mother, Tuly, called him Songsparrow and Skylark, among other loving names, for she never really did like "Diamond." He trilled and caroled about the house; he knew any tune as soon as he heard it, and invented tunes when he heard none. His mother had the wisewoman Tangle teach him The Creation of Ea and The Deed of the Young King, and at Sunreturn when he was eleven years old he sang the Winter Carol for the Lord of the Western Land, who was visiting his domain in the hills above Glade. The Lord and his Lady praised the boy's singing and gave him a tiny gold box with a diamond set in the lid, which seemed a kind and pretty gift to Diamond and his mother. But Golden was a bit impatient with the singing and the trinkets. "There are more important things for you to do, son," he said. "And greater prizes to be earned." "I don't know," he said. "Maybe we should not leave Roke." "Double-hearted? You? You gave up wizardry because you knew that if you didn't, you'd betray it." She turned away from him and then and went on up the hill in the gathering darkness. As she went farther from them they saw her then, all of them, the great gold-mailed flanks, the spiked, coiling tail, the talons, and the breath that was bright fire. On the crest of the Knoll she paused a while, her long head turning to look slowly round the Isle of Roke, gazing longest at the Grove, only a blur of darkness in darkness now. Then with a rattle like the shaking of sheets of brass the wide, varned wings opened and the dragon sprang up into the air, circled Roke Knoll once, and flew. On his rides, he sometimes passed an old house on a hill among great oaks. When he turned off the village lane up the hill, a pack of scrawny, evil-mouthed dogs came pelting and bellowing down at him. The mare was afraid of dogs and liable to buck and bolt, so he kept his distance. But he had an eye for beauty, and liked to look at the old house dreaming away in the dappled light of the early summer afternoons. Weary, evil dreams of suffocation came to him, but took no hold on him. He breathed deep. He slept. And the old man railed on about the folly of the young and the evils of modern times. naming truly, is a great power. To know the true name is to have power, as you know, mistress. And Diamond met his gaze for a moment, looked down, and said nothing. way in that great other kitchen long ago. But since he had been traveling about in Earthsea he had. "You're in such a hurry. You still know nothing." "Where's your mother?" he asked in a whisper. The Patterner's voice had grown rougher, and he suddenly brushed the little design of pebbles apart with the palm of his hand.
